Standard Refund Rule

Eligible standard-plan customers may request a refund within 30 calendar days of the first paid subscription charge for that subscription. The 30-day window is not restarted by a renewal.

Refund requests after the standard window are generally declined unless an approved exception applies.

Monthly Subscriptions

- Cancellation stops the next renewal.
- The current monthly term remains active through its paid end date.
- A partial refund is not normally issued for unused days after cancellation.
- If a duplicate charge is confirmed, the duplicate amount may be refunded outside the normal window.

Annual Subscriptions

Annual standard subscriptions follow the 30-day first-charge refund window. After that period, cancellation normally prevents the next annual renewal but does not create a prorated refund for unused months.

Enterprise Contracts

Enterprise annual contracts follow their negotiated order form; the standard 30-day refund rule does not automatically apply.

Enterprise customers must be evaluated against the executed order form, master agreement and applicable statement of work. A negotiated refund clause takes precedence over this general policy.

Trials and Payment Failures

A trial can be cancelled before conversion without a subscription charge. If payment fails after conversion, Nexora may restrict paid features after the grace period stated in the billing notice.

A failed payment does not automatically erase outstanding contractual obligations.

Upgrades and Downgrades

Upgrades take effect immediately after successful payment. Downgrades generally take effect at the next renewal to avoid loss of paid capacity during the current term.

Exceptions

Scenario	Treatment
Duplicate charge	Refund confirmed duplicate amount

Scenario	Treatment
Unauthorized charge	Investigate; refund depends on verification
Service credit	Handled under SLA, not as a general refund
Enterprise negotiated clause	Order form controls
Regulatory requirement	Escalate to Legal / Finance

Processing

Approved refunds are normally submitted to the original payment method within 7 business days. Bank or card posting time may take longer.
